INNOXIOUSNESS. n. f. [from innocent.] Harmlessness.
INNUEENDO. n. f. [innuendo, from innuo, Latin.] An oblique hint.

As if the commandments, that require obedience and forbidd murder, were to be indicted for a libellous inuendo upon all the great men that come to be concerned. L'Estrange.
Mercury, though employed on a quite contrary errand, owns it a marriage by an inuendo. Dryden.

Pursue your trade of scandal-picking,
Your hints that Stella is no chicken;
Your inuendoes, when you tell us,
That Stella loves to talk with fellows. Swift.

INNUMERABLE. adj. [innumerable, Fr. innumérabilis, Lat.] Not to be counted for multitude.

You have sent innumerable substance
To furnish Rome, and to prepare the ways
You have for dignities. Shakespeare's Henry VIII.

Cover me, ye pines,
Ye cedars! with innumerable boughs
Hide me where I may never see them more. Milton.

In lines, which appear of an equal length, one may be longer than the other by innumerable parts. Locke.

INNUMERABLY. adv. [from innumerable.] Without number.

INNUMEROUS. adj. [innumerus, Latin.] Too many to be counted.

'Twould be some solace yet, some little chearing,
In this clofe dungeon of innumeros boughs. Milton.

I take the wood,
And in thick shelter of innumeros boughs,
Enjoy the comfort gentle sleep allows. Pope's Odyssey.

TO INOCULATE. v. a. [inoculo, in and oculus, Latin.]

1. To propagate any plant by inserting its bud into another stock; to practise inoculation. See INOCULATION.

Nor are the ways alike in all
How to ingraft, how to inoculate. May's Virg. Georg.

Now is the season for the budding of the orange-tree: inoculate therefore at the commencement of this month. Evelyn.

But various are the ways to change the state,
To plant, to bud, to graft, to inoculate. Dryden.

2. To yield a bud to another stock.
Virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock, but we shall relish of it. Shakespeare's Hamlet.

Thy stock is too much out of date,
For tender plants to inoculate. Cleveland.

Where lilies, in a lovely bourn,

INOCULATION. n. f. [inoculatio, Lat. from inoculare.]

1. Inoculation is practised upon all sorts of stone-fruit, and upon oranges and jalmies. In order to perform it, be provided with a sharp pen-knife, having a flat haft, and some sound bals-mat. Having taken off the cuttings from the trees you would propagate, chuse a smooth part of the stock; then with your knife make an horizontal cut cross the rind of the stock, and from the middle of that cut make a slit downwards about two inches in length in the form of a T; but be careful not to cut too deep, lest you wound the stock: then having cut off the leaf from the bud, leaving the foot-stalk remaining, make a cross cut about half an inch below the eye, and with your knife pull off that part of the wood which was taken with the bud, observing whether the eye of the bud be left to it or not; for all these buds which lose their eyes in stripping are good for nothing: then raising the bark of the stock with the flat haft of your pen-knife clear to the wood, thrust the bud therein, placing it smooth between the rind and the wood of the stock, cutting off any part of the rind belonging to the bud which may be too long; and so having exactly fitted the bud to the stock, tie them closely round with bals-mat, beginning at the under part of the slit, and so proceed to the top, taking care not to bind round the eye of the bud. The March following cut off the stock three inches above the bud, sloping it, that the wet may pass off: to this part of the stock, above the bud, fasten the shoot which proceeds from the bud, and which would be in danger of being blown out; but this must continue no longer than one year, after which it must be cut off close above the bud, that the stock may be covered thereby. Mil'er.

INO

In the stem of Elaiana they all met, and came to be ingrafted all upon one stock, most of them by inoculation. Howel.

2. The practice of transplanting the small-pox, by infusion of the matter from ripened pustules into the veins of the uninfected, in hopes of procuring a milder sort than what frequently comes by infection. Quincy.

It is evident, by inoculation, that the smallest quantity of the matter, mixed with the blood, produceth the disease. Arbutn.

INOCULATOR. n. f. [from inoculare.]

1. One that practises the inoculation of trees.
2. One who propagates the small-pox by inoculation.

Had John a Gaddesden been now living, he would have been at the head of the inoculators. Friend's Hist. of Physick.

INQ

INQUEST. n. f. [enqueste, French; inquisitio, Latin.]

1. Judicial enquiry or examination.
What confusion of face shall we be under, when that grand inquest begins; when an account of our opportunities of doing good, and a particular of our use or misuse of them is given in? Atterbury's Sermons.

[In law.] The inquest of jurors, or by jury, is the most usual trial of all causes, both civil and criminal, in our realm; for in civil causes, after proof is made on either side, so much as each part thinks good for himself, if the doubt be in the fact, it is referred to the discretion of twelve indifferent men, impanelled by the sheriff for the purpose, and as they bring in their verdict so judgment passes: for the judge faith, the jury finds the fact thus; then is the law thus, and so we judge. Cowel.

Enquiry; search; study.

This is the laborious and vexatious inquest that the soul must make after science. South's Sermons.

INQUIETUDE. n. f. [inquietude, Fr. inquietudo, inquietus, Lat.] Disturbed state; want of quiet; attack on the quiet.

Having had such experience of his fidelity and observance abroad, he found himself engaged in honour to support him at home from any farther inquietude. Watson.
